THE CLARITY DIAGNOSTIC

A World-Class Dentist Running a Practice No One Can Find — and a Facebook Page That Says It Closed in 2020

5 findings. The fixes. In order of impact.

Peak Dental Group — Nolanridge | Calgary NW, AB

Prepared by Trent Wehrhahn · H-Cube Marketing · April 2026

I spent some time with Peak Dental Group's digital footprint this week. Here's what stood out.

Peak Dental Group — Nolanridge has built something real. Dr. Sameet Gill, your Founder and Clinical Director, was named Dentist of the Year in Canada and Young Dentist of the Year globally at the 2024 Forttuna Global Excellence Awards. The practice runs 7 days a week with Monday and Friday evening hours to 7 PM. The service menu — implants, full-arch implant treatment, Invisalign, cosmetic, emergency, pediatric through geriatric — covers what a top-tier NW Calgary clinic should offer.

> The clinical foundation is real. It's the discovery infrastructure that isn't working.

The problem is that none of this is visible to a patient searching for a dentist in NW Calgary. The Facebook page has displayed "Permanently Closed" since approximately 2020. The Google Business Profile (GBP) carries a generic "Dentist" category, keeping Peak Dental invisible for every service-specific search. After 10 years of operation, the practice has 131 Google reviews — against a competitive benchmark of 500+, while Nolan Hill Dental and Sarcee Dental each hold over 1,000. Peak Dental appeared in zero of the five highest-value Maps searches I ran.

ORGANIC MAPS PACK APPEARANCES

Across all five highest-value NW Calgary dental searches

The cost of this gap compounds every month. Every patient who searches "Calgary NW dental implants" or "Calgary NW cosmetic dentist" is finding a competitor. Every patient who checks Facebook before calling finds a business that says it shut down. And the paid advertising the practice has started running is driving clicks into systems that aren't ready to convert them.

This audit lays out five findings, in order of impact, with the complete fix for each one spelled out.

How I See This

When I looked at Peak Dental Group's online presence this week, the first thing I noticed was a gap between what this practice has actually built and what anyone searching for a dentist in NW Calgary can see. Dr. Gill has a credential that no other practice in this market holds — Dentist of the Year in Canada, Young Dentist of the Year globally — and it's sitting on an interior team page, invisible to anyone who finds the practice through Google. The service menu covers the full range of high-value procedures. The hours beat every nearby competitor. And the GBP category is the same generic "Dentist" you'd get by default if you set up the listing in ten minutes and never came back to it.

> Peak Dental is paying to be found in the places it should rank organically — while the channels patients use to verify a practice say either 'closed' or 'generic dentist.'

What this adds up to is a discovery infrastructure that has never caught up with a clinical operation that has been growing for 10 years. The GBP tells Google nothing about implants, cosmetics, or Invisalign — so Google doesn't include Peak Dental in the results where those searches appear. A competitor with 83 reviews ranks for "Calgary NW cosmetic dentist." Peak Dental has 131 reviews and doesn't appear. The difference isn't patient satisfaction — the 4.7-star rating rules that out. It's a 30-minute configuration fix that hasn't happened yet.

GOOGLE REVIEWS AFTER 10 YEARS

Nolan Hill Dental, two kilometers away, has 1,061

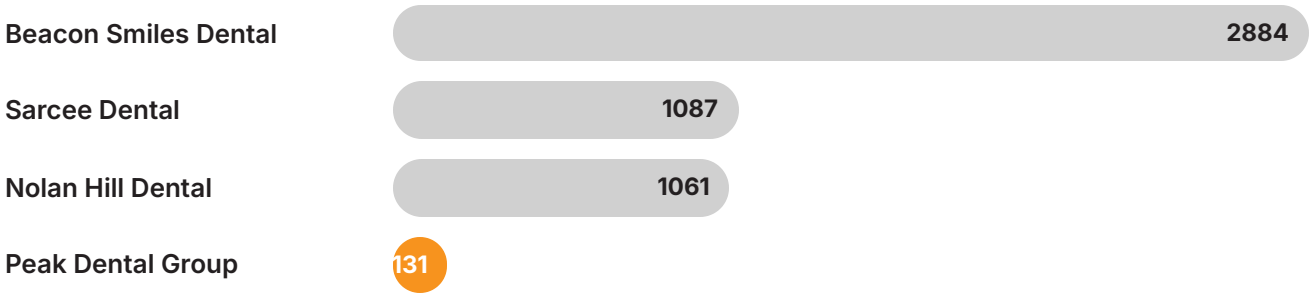
Then there's the Facebook page, which has told every patient who checked it that the practice closed approximately six years ago. The practice has recently started running paid Google Maps ads — including a $77 Emergency Exam offer — to compensate for the organic visibility that isn't there. That's a reasonable short-term response. But the ad drives clicks to a contact form rather than a booking system, some of those patients then check Facebook and find "Permanently Closed," and the revenue opportunity from those clicks flows through infrastructure that was never built to capture it.

A note on the paid Maps ad: The Emergency Exam campaign produces impressions that would otherwise go to competitors — it's not wasted spend. But paid visibility is rented. It disappears the moment the budget does. The organic systems in Findings 1 and 3 build compounding authority that increases over time and eventually makes the ad spend optional rather than structural. The goal of this audit is to build toward that transition.

The five findings below are sequenced from root cause to downstream consequence. Finding 2 is the most urgent fix — it can be done today in under 30 minutes. Finding 1 is the highest-leverage fix — structural, but the one that compounds in your favor rather than against you. The other three are medium-effort changes that produce disproportionate results once the root causes are addressed.

1 A Decade of Patients — Without a System to Turn Them Into Proof

I noticed that Peak Dental Group has 131 Google reviews after approximately 10 years in operation. The 4.7-star rating tells me the patient experience is strong — people who visit clearly like what they find. The three most recent reviews I saw were from January and February 2026, pointing to a current velocity of roughly 2–3 new reviews per month.



Google review counts, NW Calgary dental practices, April 2026

WHY THIS MATTERS

26%

OF THE 500-REVIEW COMPETITIVE BENCHMARK FOR A 10-YEAR PRACTICE

131 reviews accumulated over a decade, without a solicitation system in place

The review gap between Peak Dental and its nearest major competitors isn't a patient satisfaction problem — the 4.7-star rating makes that clear. It's the gap that accumulates when a practice delivers excellent care without any mechanism to convert that experience into digital proof. Nolan Hill Dental, two kilometers from the Nolanridge location, has 1,061 Google reviews. Sarcee Dental has 1,087. Beacon Smiles Dental — the dominant NW Calgary practice by review authority — has 2,884. These practices are not better at dentistry. They have systems that turn every appointment into a visible signal.

Review volume, velocity, and recency are among the signals that influence local Maps ranking, and in competitive markets they often become major differentiators. A practice at 131 reviews accumulating at 2–3 per month will not appear organically in the Maps pack for competitive NW Calgary searches — the research confirms this across all five service terms. For a practice offering dental implants and full-arch implant treatment, Maps invisibility carries a direct financial cost. Patients searching "Calgary NW dental implants" are high-intent and ready to book. Using a rough implant case value range of $5,000–$15,000 per case and a full-arch case value range of $15,000–$35,000 per case, even one missed case per month could represent $60,000–$420,000 in annual production opportunity — a range that reflects how much the mix matters. The mechanism is the same regardless of where the actual number lands: high-intent searches, high case values, and the practice isn't there.

> The patients are happy. The system just never asked them to say so.

HERE'S WHAT I'D DO

Build the solicitation pipeline (weeks 1–2): Most practice management systems support post-appointment automation. Set up an SMS or email that sends 2–4 hours after appointment completion — not immediately, not the next morning — with a single sentence and a direct link to the Google review form. Short, low friction: "Thanks for coming in today — if you have a moment, we'd love a Google review: [link]." That's the whole message.

Train the front desk on a verbal ask (same week): The automation handles volume. The in-person ask handles patients who prefer it. One sentence at checkout: "We really appreciate Google reviews — if you were happy today, it helps other families find us." No script pressure, just a natural ask.

Respond to every review (ongoing): Owner responses may support the engagement and trust signals that matter both to prospective patients and to Google's local ranking assessment. Personalized responses — something specific from the review rather than a generic thank-you — signal that someone at the practice is paying attention. Aim to respond within 48 hours of every new review.

Effort: Structural

2 The Facebook Page Has Told Patients the Clinic Is Closed for Six Years

I noticed that Peak Dental Group's Facebook page is currently listed as "Permanently Closed." Based on available evidence, this designation appears to have been in place since approximately 2020 — though I can't confirm the exact date from what I had access to. The practice has operated 7 days a week continuously for 10 years. The Facebook page has 11 followers.

> The practice is open every day of the week. Facebook says it shut down when the world went into lockdown — and has never been corrected.

WHY THIS MATTERS

~6 years

APPROXIMATE DURATION OF THE "PERMANENTLY CLOSED" FACEBOOK STATUS

While the practice operated 7 days a week throughout

Every patient who receives a referral and checks Facebook before calling is told the practice no longer exists. Every patient who clicks the paid Maps ad, then verifies on Facebook — same result. Every existing patient who mentions Peak Dental to a friend, who then looks it up — same result. Referral chains break at this touchpoint invisibly, with no signal back to the practice that it's happening.

This isn't a missed engagement opportunity. It's active misdirection that has been running for approximately six years. The volume of lost patient opportunities isn't measurable, but the mechanism is clear: anyone who touches this listing before calling is told not to bother.

HERE'S WHAT I'D DO

This is the fastest fix in the audit. Here's the exact sequence:

Log into Facebook Business Manager → your Page → Page Settings → Page Info → find the operating status field → change from "Permanently Closed" to "Open" → update hours to match the current GBP listing (Monday–Friday with evening hours to 7 PM, Saturday and Sunday 9 AM–5 PM) → add a current profile photo (team photo or clinic exterior) → add a current cover image → confirm the address at 155 Nolanridge Ct NW #135 is accurate → save.

Total time: under 30 minutes. This can be done today, before any other fix in this audit.

The page doesn't need to become a content hub immediately. The minimum viable state is accurate status, accurate hours, a current photo so it doesn't look abandoned. Content strategy can follow. The status fix is urgent.

Effort: Quick win

3 Google Can't Place Peak Dental for Implants, Invisalign, or Cosmetic Searches — Because the GBP Doesn't Know They Offer Them

I noticed that Peak Dental Group's GBP is categorized as "Dentist" — the generic default, with no service-specific secondary categories confirmed. I also noticed that Aesthetic Dental Studio NW Calgary, a competitor with 83 Google reviews, ranks organically for "Calgary NW cosmetic dentist." Peak Dental has 131 reviews, offers cosmetic services, and does not appear in the same search.

83 reviews — ranks for 'Calgary NW cosmetic dentist'

AESTHETIC DENTAL STUDIO NW CALGARY

131 reviews — does not appear in that search

PEAK DENTAL GROUP

The difference isn't review count. Aesthetic Dental has a Cosmetic Dentist GBP category. Peak Dental has 'Dentist.'

WHY THIS MATTERS

4 of 5

ORGANIC MAPS APPEARANCES FOR NOSEHILL DENTAL CENTRE (391 REVIEWS)

Peak Dental (4.7★, 131 reviews) appears in 0 of the same 5 searches

Nosehill Dental Centre — 4.6 stars, 391 reviews — appears organically in four of the five highest-value NW Calgary service searches. Peak Dental — 4.7 stars, 131 reviews — appears in none. The difference isn't star rating. It isn't primarily review count, either: Nosehill doesn't hold a meaningful review advantage over Peak Dental in any category that would explain the ranking gap alone. GBP configuration is one of the primary signals Google uses when matching businesses to local service queries. A practice listed only as "Dentist" will not reliably surface for "cosmetic dentist" or "dental implants" searches — there's no category signal to match against. Adding service-specific secondary categories gives Google what it needs to include this practice in the results that matter most. Category changes often produce measurable Maps movement within 30 days, typically ahead of any review velocity improvement.

The practice's strongest differentiator — Dr. Gill's national and global recognition — also appears nowhere in the GBP description or listing. That credential, placed in the first line of the GBP description, gives any patient who finds the listing a reason to choose this practice before they ever click through to the website.

> Aesthetic Dental Studio has 83 reviews and ranks for cosmetic searches. Peak Dental has 131 and doesn't appear. That gap isn't about reviews.

HERE'S WHAT I'D DO

GBP categories (30 minutes): Log into the GBP dashboard → Edit Profile → Business Category. Keep "Dentist" as primary. Add secondary categories including Cosmetic Dentist, Dental Implants Provider, Emergency Dental Service, and Pediatric Dentist. If the Invisalign Provider category is available in Alberta, add it — if not, reinforce Invisalign through your services list, GBP description, and posts instead. Each secondary category expands the range of service searches the practice can appear for.

GBP description (1–2 hours): Write a 750-character description that leads with the practice's differentiators. A strong opening: "Peak Dental Group is an award-winning NW Calgary dental clinic led by Dr. Sameet Gill, DMD MBA — named Dentist of the Year in Canada and Young Dentist of the Year globally at the 2024 Forttuna Global Excellence Awards. We provide dental implants, full-arch implant treatment, Invisalign, cosmetic dentistry, and full-family care — 7 days a week, with evening hours Monday and Friday." Pack in service keywords naturally. Google treats this description as part of its relevance assessment for local queries.

GBP posts (monthly): The April 22 post about Denture Implants is a good start — keep the cadence going. The next post should feature Dr. Gill's award: a photo, a brief description of the recognition, a link to book. One post per month is the floor. Two to three is better.

Effort: Medium

4 The Practice Is Open 7 Days a Week — But Can't Capture a Patient Who Finds Them at 8 PM Saturday

I noticed that Peak Dental Group's website offers a "Request Appointment" button that routes to a contact form — not a real-time scheduling system. No self-scheduling platform was found on the site. The practice operates Monday through Sunday, with Monday and Friday evening hours to 7 PM.

7 days a week, including evenings

PHYSICAL ACCESS

0 hours available

ONLINE SELF-BOOKING

Peak Dental has built the most accessible hours schedule in NW Calgary — without the booking infrastructure to capture patients who discover the practice outside staffed hours.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Most NW Calgary dental practices are closed Sundays. Many close by 5 PM on weekdays. Peak Dental's 7-day schedule with extended evening hours is a genuine competitive advantage — the kind of access that working families and patients with dental emergencies specifically search for. It should be a central marketing message. Right now, it's an operational asset that can't be acted on after hours.

> Peak Dental built physical access that beats every nearby competitor — with no way for a patient to book into it after business hours.

A patient who discovers the practice at 8 PM Saturday — through a Google search, a referral, or a paid ad click — cannot self-schedule. They submit a form and wait for a callback the next business day. If they're searching Saturday evening, they're comparing options. Any competitor with a live booking button gets the appointment.

The paid Maps ad sharpens this further. A patient clicks the ad, lands on a contact form instead of a booking flow, and may then check Facebook (Finding 2). The ad spend is real. The conversion infrastructure doesn't match it.

A note on the Emergency Exam offer: The $77 Emergency Exam is the kind of accessible entry point that can be effective for urgent-care patient acquisition. Before publishing this price point in paid advertising, it's worth reviewing the language against the Alberta Dental Association & College (ADA&C) advertising guidelines, which regulate pricing claims and promotional offers in Alberta. The underlying intent — giving a new patient a clear, compelling reason to choose this practice for emergency care — is sound strategy. The specific framing should be confirmed against current ADA&C requirements before going live.

HERE'S WHAT I'D DO

Select a booking platform (week 1): Jane App is a well-known Canadian online booking option used across various healthcare practices, but the right platform depends on your current practice management system's integration capabilities. Other options include NexHealth, Dentrix Online Booking, and the native booking tools available through your existing software. Evaluate based on integration fit, not brand familiarity.

Configure and launch (weeks 2–4): Set up appointment types, available time slots, and provider availability. Build in a brief intake form so the team has context before each new patient appointment. Test the full booking flow on a mobile phone — most after-hours patients book on phones. The experience should be fast and require as few taps as possible.

Update every touchpoint: Replace the "Request Appointment" contact form links across the site with the live booking URL. Add the booking link to the GBP profile — there's a direct booking link field in the GBP dashboard. Add it to the Instagram bio and the corrected Facebook page per Finding 2. The goal is one click from any discovery channel to a booked appointment, regardless of the time.

5 An Internationally Award-Winning Clinical Director Whose Credentials Don't Appear in Any Discovery Channel

I noticed that Dr. Sameet Gill — Founder and Clinical Director of Peak Dental Group — was named Dentist of the Year in Canada and Young Dentist of the Year globally at the 2024 Forttuna Global Excellence Awards. I also noticed that this credential appears on an interior team page of the practice website and nowhere else in any discovery channel.

> No other dental practice in NW Calgary holds this credential. It's sitting on a team page.

DISCOVERY CHANNELS SURFACING DR. GILL'S 2024 AWARD

GBP description, Maps listing, homepage hero, paid ad copy, social content: none reference Dentist of the Year in Canada.

Trust is largely established before the first call. A patient comparing two practices in Google Maps reads what they can see — review count, star rating, category, description. Peak Dental currently reads as "4.7 stars, 131 reviews, Dentist." Nolan Hill Dental reads as "4.9 stars, 1,061 reviews, Dentist." On those signals alone, Nolan Hill looks more established.

Used carefully and accurately, the Dentist of the Year in Canada credential changes that comparison. A patient who sees "Led by Dr. Sameet Gill — named Dentist of the Year in Canada in 2024" in the GBP description has a concrete, third-party reason to trust this practice before they click through. No other NW Calgary dental practice holds equivalent national or global recognition. This is the practice's single strongest differentiator, and it currently reaches no one who finds the practice through any digital channel. Getting it in front of the right patients — accurately and in the right places — is one afternoon of distribution work.

HERE'S WHAT I'D DO

Today — GBP description: Add "Led by Dr. Sameet Gill, DMD MBA — named Dentist of the Year in Canada and Young Dentist of the Year globally at the 2024 Forttuna Global Excellence Awards" to the first line of the GBP description. This is the most valuable sentence this practice can place in front of new patients on Google, and it takes fifteen minutes to add.

This week — GBP post: Publish a GBP post featuring Dr. Gill's photo and the award. Keep it brief: the recognition, what it means for patients, a link to book. A photo of Dr. Gill in the clinic makes it concrete.

This week — homepage update: Add the award credential to the homepage hero or the first section below it. Every visitor who arrives from any channel — paid ad, Maps click, organic search — should see this recognition within the first scroll.

This month — social content: One LinkedIn post, one Instagram post. This is the kind of credential that gets shared by colleagues, patients, and referring professionals. The award does the work — it doesn't need elaborate production.

A note on paid ad copy: When adding this credential to paid advertising, review the language against ADA&C advertising guidelines before publishing. The intent — giving patients an accurate, compelling reason to choose this practice — is straightforward. The specific phrasing in regulated advertising contexts should be confirmed against current requirements before going live.

Other Things I Noticed

The same-complex competitor is smaller — for now. Nolan Ridge Dental operates at 255 Nolanridge Ct NW — the same complex as Peak Dental. They currently have 113 Google reviews to Peak Dental's 131, with a comparable 4.7-star rating. Peak Dental holds the review advantage in its own building right now. That advantage erodes if Nolan Ridge implements a solicitation system before Peak Dental does. Worth tracking monthly.

Paid Maps ads without an organic foundation have a cost ceiling. The Emergency Exam campaign is a reasonable short-term tactic. But paid visibility is rented — it disappears when the budget does. The organic systems described in Findings 1 and 3 build compounding authority that increases over time and eventually makes the ad spend optional rather than structural. The path is to build toward that transition, not to depend on paid ads indefinitely.

The 4.7-star rating is an asset, not a liability. In a competitive Maps pack where most practices cluster between 4.8 and 4.9, the gap is small enough that GBP optimization and review volume will carry more weight than star rating alone. As reviews accumulate at higher velocity, the rating may improve naturally. Responding to every review — particularly any critical ones — demonstrates active engagement that prospective patients notice.

Women-owned and LGBTQ+ friendly designations are in the GBP but absent from the website. These attributes appear in the GBP listing, where some patients will see them. They belong on the website too — briefly and matter-of-factly, on the homepage or About page. Some patients specifically filter for practices with these designations, and a website mention makes the signal findable regardless of how the patient arrives.

How I'd Sequence the Fixes

This week

- Change Facebook status from "Permanently Closed" to "Open" — update hours, add a current photo (Finding 2, 30 minutes)
- Add service-specific GBP secondary categories: Cosmetic Dentist, Dental Implants Provider, Emergency Dental Service, Pediatric Dentist, and Invisalign Provider if available in Alberta (Finding 3, 30 minutes)
- Add Dr. Gill's award credential to the first line of the GBP description (Findings 3 + 5, 1 hour)
- Publish a GBP post featuring Dr. Gill's 2024 award with a photo (Finding 5, 30 minutes)

Next 30 days

- Select and begin implementing a real-time booking platform — evaluate against your current practice management system's integration capabilities (Finding 4)
- Update homepage to surface Dr. Gill's award above the fold (Finding 5)
- Implement review solicitation automation — post-appointment SMS or email with a direct Google review link (Finding 1)
- Train the front desk team on a verbal review request at checkout (Finding 1)
- Begin monthly GBP post cadence — service spotlights, team content, patient education (Finding 3)

30–90 days

- Launch online booking and update all touchpoints: website, GBP direct booking link, paid ad landing pages (Finding 4)
- Monitor review velocity weekly — target 5+ new reviews per month within 60 days, 8–10 per month within 90 days (Finding 1)
- Publish social content featuring Dr. Gill's award and practice differentiators on Instagram and LinkedIn (Finding 5)
- Add women-owned and LGBTQ+ friendly designations to the website homepage or About page (Other Things I Noticed)
- Review GBP category performance — check which service searches have begun showing ranking movement (Finding 3)

Ongoing

- Maintain the review solicitation pipeline — the highest-compounding action in this audit (Finding 1)
- Respond to every Google review, personalized, within 48 hours (Finding 1)
- Post to GBP monthly at minimum — service education, team, patient care stories (Finding 3)
- Monitor Nolan Ridge Dental's review count monthly — protect the in-complex review advantage (Other Things I Noticed)
- Evaluate paid Maps ad spend quarterly — as organic presence builds, assess whether budget can shift or reduce (Cross-cutting)

The Next Step

> *Everything in this audit is yours to implement. The fixes are spelled out, in order of impact. Most practices won't get to them — not because they don't matter, but because there's never time. If you'd rather have someone run them for you, the Clarity Audit is the next step.
